Colorado Companies to Watch is pleased to announce RTL Networks, Inc., as This Week's Colorado Company to Watch. M3 Insurance, and the Colorado Office of Economic Development and International Trade, in partnership with Colorado Companies to Watch congratulate President/CEO Richard Lewis, Executive Assistant Irena Vaughn and all of their employees on this accomplishment.

RTL Networks, Inc delivers a full range of products and services focused on helping the Department of Defense, Federal Government and commercial customers increase productivity and maximize performance and security of their operational assets.

In addition to an elite cadre of project managers and technical support staff, RTL Networks, inc. significantly differentiates itself by utilizing customizable, collaborative technologies such as Microsoft SharePoint to provide its customers additional functionality and tools for every engagement.

One popular implementation of SharePoint is to provide a Customer Engagement Portal; which allows clients to better monitor contract progress and compliance on a near real-time basis and throughout the duration of every contract. In addition, the SharePoint Portal allows clients to access and review areas of concern, such as vacancies/hires, problem resolution, training materials, schedules, and various other areas identified by Clients and RTL personnel.

Another manner in which RTL acquires a competitive edge via technology is to place tools developed for internal use, as commercial offerings. For example, RTL developed an application to capture and reformat the output from our time accounting system, into a format that is readable by our accounting system. This tool saves our accounting staff a tremendous amount of time and eliminates the need to hire a staff accountant. We now offer other companies (who use this same time accounting system) the same savings by licensing the software for a fee.

Headlines burst with examples of unethical conduct in business. RTL Networks (RTL) demands a high standard of values, ethics, and character from all employees. This practice has proven successful. Despite external economic fluctuations over the last decade, RTL's average annual growth rate from 2003 to 2009 has been in excess of 100%; including the very challenging recession years of 2008 and 2009. To support continued growth, RTL has smartly invested in staff and infrastructure. Technical and management personnel have been added to ensure additional workloads do not cause a decline in product quality, and clear processes and operations procedures ensure employees clearly understand their jobs are and how they will be evaluated.

Despite its success, Richard Lewis looked for opportunities to improve the new outsourcing division in its recruitment and staffing. In 2007, he established new processes to communicate and "fill" new and vacated positions quickly and efficiently. As a result RTL has maintained its successful relationship with the USDA with optimism of renewing the project.

Colorado Companies to Watch is a dynamic program honoring growing companies that are developing valuable products and services, creating quality jobs, enriching communities, and building new industries throughout Colorado. High-performance, second-stage companies account for most of the economic growth, community development and economic independence in our state. The State of Colorado supports Colorado Companies to Watch through the Colorado Office of Economic Development and International Trade both in leadership and sponsorship. This statewide effort sought out nominations from all sectors and communities and is not industry specific. The winners represent a broad range of economic sectors and regions of our great state. Companies to Watch (CTW) is a national awards program developed by the Edward Lowe Foundation to honor second-stage companies.
